Athalia

The great Handel scholar Winton Dean asserted without reservation ‘Athalia is the first great English oratorio’. The libretto by Samuel Humphreys was based on Racine’s Athalie of 1691. The action takes place in Jerusalem in the temple precincts. The story is based around the deposing of a tyrannical monarch (Athalia) who demands that the Jewish people worship Baal rather than God. Intrigue abounds and eventually the rightful King is crowned, Athalia’s retinue abandon her and she is put to death. The first performance was given in the Sheldonian Theatre in Oxford in July 1733 and was a huge success.
